

Elvi Edwards

Elvi Edwards is an award winning artist well known for her brilliant watercolours of birds and flora. Her colours glow with jewel-like iridescence and entice the viewer farther and deeper into each painting seeking out subtle nuances that at first were illusive and later remarkably evident.

Lately, she had been captured by the nostalgic breezes of the Victorian era, of whites and laces, traces of colours just barely there. Her open window series invites us into a world of calm and serenity where even little creatures dare to peek and stay awhile.

Elvi has her studio by the St Lawrence River where she teaches and paints. Her love of nature comes from a childhood immersed in woodland walks and talks learning to watch as each part of nature unravels and shows its resplendency. It is over many years that an artist develops and refines what she sees and how to the best of her ability to put to paper all she knows, (and has yet to learn) and brings to life what can move the spirit and soul.
