

Janet Gray

Janet is a Manotick artist who has used the Canadian Arctic as the basis for many of her paintings. Although many people would find Canada's Arctic a desolate and inhospitable wasteland of ice and cold, for Janet Gray it is a place of contrast, inspiration and mystery. Her memories of Nunavut series, painted in watercolour from memory of her many experiences in Canada's north, hang in homes across the country and also in the U.S.A., England and Scotland.

Janet also enjoys photography, and uses her photographs along with her sketches to refresh her memory for painting landscape scenes in oil.

A fine arts graduate of St. Lawrence College, Janet continues to attend and enjoy classes at the college.
